

Gratefully, the eight children ate their cake. They were so hungry! It was late and their new neighbour had forgotten to say that she would be delayed. Now they felt great as they travelled through a thin veil of light rain on the freight train. It would not be the same living in Spain, but they knew they had to obey their parents. It would be like a great holiday and was well worth the wait.